The Heart of Michigan Farm Bureau

Founded in 1919, Michigan Farm Bureau has proudly served as the voice of Michigan agriculture for more than a century. Today, Michigan Farm Bureau is home to 65 county Farm Bureaus, managed by an elected board of directors comprised of farmers and individuals in the agriculture industry. The strength of the organization comes from the thousands of volunteer leaders advancing agriculture through their involvement with the county Farm Bureau.

Your Involvement Matters

The real value of your membership is in opportunities for involvement, as a representative of — and advocate for — Michigan agriculture. There is always a need for an enthusiastic member, as an out-in-front leader or a behind-the-scenes doer. There is great satisfaction in working hand-in-hand with friends and neighbors to support Michigan's agriculture industry.

“ Farm Bureau has given me the opportunity to have a seat at the table, have a stronger voice, and more knowledge about the industry I am passionate about.

DARCY LIPSKEY, SANILAC COUNTY FARM BUREAU MEMBER

Raises beef and goats; grows corn, wheat and alfalfa

Value of Membership

Learn more about our member savings programs on the back page.

“ Agriculture needs to be represented by a fair and respected organization, and that's exactly what Farm Bureau is regardless of the commodity you produce or the size of your operation. Federal and state legislators are highly influenced by Farm Bureau's stance on pending decisions regarding agriculture, and farmers need that.

Giving Michigan Agriculture a Voice

Farm Bureau works to advance proposals beneficial to farms and agribusinesses and defend against those that aren't. Members have exclusive access to issue experts with extensive experience with Right to Farm, taxation, zoning, environmental regulation, transportation, labor and more. Farm Bureau provides an unrivaled industry presence in Lansing and Washington, a platform to voice concerns on issues impacting your farms, families, and communities, as well as the opportunity to guide the organization's policy stances.
